ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY, LIVERPOOL & LONDON
Sproat & Co.
AGENTS FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA.

The annual meeting of the proprietors of this company was held on Friday last, at the head offices, Royal Insurance Buildings, North John-street, Liverpool. Charles Turner, Esq., chairman of the board of directors, presided.

The notice convening the meeting having been read, the report, as follows, was taken as read:—

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The directors have the pleasure of reporting that in this branch of the business the results of the year 1873 have been the most satisfactory, as respects the aggregate amount of profit realised, which the company has ever experienced.

The fire premiums for the period amount to £807,405 19s. 6d., and the losses to £436,190 10s. After the deduction of agents' commission and management expenses, the profit on the transactions of the twelve months, including interest, amounts to £216,227 16s. 5d. During the year the business in America has been reduced and it will accordingly be observed that there is a slight diminution of income, when compared with 1872. The account for "unearned premium for increased revenue" is therefore closed for the present, and the surplus carried to fire fund, which is thereby increased to £354,637 10s.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

During the past year, 1406 new proposals were made to the company. Of these 1,099 were accepted and completed for £514,638, the new premiums thereon being £17,271 2s. 9d. The proposals declined during the period amounted to £121,744. The total income from premiums, after deducting re-assurances, amounted to £237,415 10s. 8d., and the interest received from investments (exclusive of that on the annuity funds) was £64,990 9s. 10d. The claims during the year were:—By death—original sums assured, £117,228 17s. 6d.; bonus additions thereon, £7,423 11s. 2d. By matured policies (including children's endowments)—original sums assured, £1,750; bonus additions thereon £134 15s.; total, £126,537 3s. 8d.

In the annuity branch the purchase money received for new annuities, together with the premiums on contingent annuities, amounted to £12,451 6s. 2d., and the interest to £7,544 9s. Thirty annuitants have died during the year, the annual payments to whom amounted to £1,473 2s.

The result of the operations for the year is that, after payment of all claims, annuities, and expenses of every description, £158,547 0s. 4d. has been added to the life funds, making the total accumulations of the life branch of the company £1,761,523 11s. 11d.

The quinquennial investigation of the life business will be made at the close of the present year, preparatory to the declaration of a bonus to the assured at the annual meeting in 1875. The method adopted at the investigation of 1870 for securing perfect accuracy in the calculations will again be followed, and a separate valuation of the liabilities will accordingly be obtained from an independent actuary, in addition to the valuation by the officers of the company.

During the four years now expired the mortality has continued to be below the expectation, and the life fund has been increased by a larger amount than in any similar period since the establishment of the company. From a review of the business at the end of the first half of the present year, it may be fairly anticipated that, after making ample provision to meet a somewhat higher rate of mortality, which the recent researches of the Institute of Actuaries shew may be anticipated, the balance of profit will be satisfactory alike to the shareholders and the assured. oc3

A CARD.
SAN JUAN ISLAND, Oct. 9th, 1874.
EDITOR BRITISH COLONIST—DEAR SIR:—I take the good opportunity of sending you the following letter which I received from Dr. Siddall, a resident of British Columbia. Knowing that Dr. Siddall will read your valuable paper, I will express my kind thanks to him through your paper for the nice and valuable present which I received from him, as my dear readers will notice in the following letter, which I received from Dr. Siddall accompanying the present. You will please publish his letter that he sent me in order to show the Committee of Odd Fellows in Victoria that there are some men who wish to do more justice to the deserving party than they did in regard to the Dwyer reward settlement.
I have the honor to remain, yours respectfully,
CHARLES McCOY, San Juan Island.

VICTORIA, Aug. 29th, 1874.
To Mr. C. McCOY, San Juan Island, W. T.
DEAR SIR:—Believing, as I do, that it is quite possible that you saved my life, as well as many others, by your being instrumental in bringing to justice "Joe," the Kanaka, that foul murderer of the Dwyer family, and knowing that you were dealt very unfairly with by the public, I may say, in not receiving the greater portion of the money that they saw fit to offer, both at San Juan and in Victoria, to anyone who would rid them of the then unknown terror; and it is my opinion that it is the Hannah family on account of their gun, together with yourself, who should have received the honor and award which were due to you. For instance, first, without the gun, which was the sting of his heart, he never would have confessed; and, secondly, without your able cunning and ability he never would have got him to confess. I therefore wish to offer you my sympathy and gratitude by presenting you with a gold ring which I had made to order. On it you will find the initials of my name and yours with the word "to" between, signifying that it is given by me to you; and as this ring is pure and without an end so may your acts ever be pure and without end while on this earth, and may God reward you with an eternal weight of glory in the Heavens.
And now trusting that you may receive this with the spirit in which it is given, I remain ever with respect,
D. SIDDALL.

SATURDAY MORNING, OCT. 24TH, 1874.

L. P. FISHER, 20 and 21 New Merchants' Exchange is our authorized Agent in San Francisco.

Oration on the Nature and Objects of Free Masonry.

Delivered by R. W. Fred'k. Williams, Grand Director of Ceremonies, acting as Grand Orator of the Day, on the Occasion of the Dedication of Masonic Hall, Nanaimo, B.C., October 21st, 1874.

BRETHREN,—By command of the most Worshipful the Grand Master, and in accordance with the ancient custom usual on occasions like the present, the duty devolves on me of delivering an address on the merits and obligations of our Order.

Were I as able as I am willing, the task would easily be accomplished, for the materials are indeed abundant to prove its antiquity and its value. Masonry was practised by the shepherd Astronomers and Astrologers of Chaldea, by the Priest Kings of Egypt, by the Brahmins of India, and by the Philosophers of Greece, and it reached its meridian splendour when Solomon, the then Grand Master of the Order, surrounded by his Brethren, laid with Masonic honours the foundation stone of the temple which he intended to dedicate to the service of God. We have the authority of a credible Roman historian for saying that when Julian, the apostate, 1800 years after, cleared the foundations of the same temple, the vaulted chamber was discovered in which our ancient Brethren had assembled, with its most sacred and most secret symbols perfect and undisturbed. These symbols are to be traced among nations wide as the poles asunder, differing as much in their language, creed, colour and character as in the period at which and the land in which they lived; they are to be found on the Pyramids of Egypt, the caves of Elephanta, the temples of classic Greece, the round towers of Ireland, the courts of the Alhambra, and the arches of our sublime cathedrals. Whence this universal presence and permanance? Because its foundations rest not on the mutable and perishable circumstances of external life, but on sentiments which spring from and appear to the most deep-seated affections of our nature, and are founded on the purest principles of piety and virtue.

The volume of the sacred Law is never closed in our Lodges; from its pages we learn our duty to God, our neighbours and ourselves. We learn to look up to God as the one great cause, to implore His aid on all our lawful undertakings, and to bend with resignation to His divine will. We are taught to regard the whole human race as the children of one father, whom we are to treat with justice, to relieve in want and comfort in sorrow. For ourselves, we are taught to be prudent, temperate, enduring and just. As citizens we are enjoined to be loyal and peaceful, our motto being "Fear God, honour the Sovereign." Under every emblem in our Lodges, there lie solemn and important truths, tending to purify the morals, to improve the understanding, bind the human family more closely together, and to raise the soul to God. The implements of labour teach us the use we are to make upon earth of the talents committed to us by our Great Creator and Judge, and remind us of the account we must render of their use when we are summoned to His presence in the Grand Lodge above. Freemasons, in those dark ages when might made right, guarded with jealous care the feeble ray of light which was in hourly danger of being extinguished by the violence of rude and untutored savages. Sustained by the felicitous combination of the love of art, and the sublime truths of religion and morality which Freemasonary taught them, they fanned the feeble spark until it burst into a bright and enduring flame, which has shown its fruits in the creation of those miracles of Art which still astonish, delight, and instruct the world. Freemasonry has bound men more closely together than any other human institution. In those dark ages to which I have alluded, Freemasonry not only protected those who were within its pale, but threw its shield like its offspring chivalry, over all who were suffering and oppressed. In our more fortunate age it has cemented friendship, restored the credit of the bankrupt merchant, succoured the ship-wrecked and exiled, let the prisoner free, fed the hungry, clothed the naked, visited the widow and orphan, and even arrested the uplifted steel thirsting for a foeman's blood. It has as universal language, and an universal fund of benevolence, It brings all classes of men together in equal and social intercourse. In our Lodges are those whose birth is noble, whose possessions are vast, whose talents are great, and whose taste is refined; by their side sit those who possess none of these things, and whom the outer world deems insignificant, because they are poor. Yet to them the rich man yields precedence and obedience in the Lodge, and in the public streets and market place salutes their Brothers. Thus each learns to read and value the mind of the other, and to feel a deep sympathy for each other in the want and pains of their common nature.

The scrupulous exclusion from our lodges, of all topics of religious and political discussion—those fruitful sources of envenomed dissension elsewhere, maintains this good feeling, and gives permanency to our institution.

The names of Alfred the Great—and many others sovereigns, William of Wykeham, Cardinal Wolsey, Newton, Locke, Sir Christopher Wren, Inigo Jones, Wellington, Washington, and our present Prince of Wales, &c., silence calumny, and show that our science has a deep and abiding interest for the Statesman, the Minister of Religion, the Patriot, the Man of Science, and the Philanthropist. And now, my brethren, let me ask, how shall we best maintain and transmit the dignity of our Order, unsullied to our successors? I answer by simply remembering that to each of us great talents, pure Masonic jewels, of which those we wear are but the emblems, have been committed, which it is a sin against him who confided them to us to bury in a napkin. Let each remember that he is a stone forming a part of the great Masonic Temple, whether in the foundations, the buttresses, the walls, or the pinnacle, to which he can give strength, grace, and lustre, by a life modled on Masonic principle or dim its brightness, and sap its foundations by forgetfulness of his obligations. Whatever good thing we find to do, let us do it at once, and with all our might, for "the night cometh when no man can work." Our own cup has been filled to overflowing by the Great Dispenser of all bounty, with corn, and wine, with oil and salt. Let us show our gratitude to the giver, by extending the readiest and amplest relief, to every being who bears his image, who depends upon his providence, who is fed by his bounty, and who relies on his all-comprehending mercy. Brother Masons, let us look beyond the narrow limits of particular institutions, and recognise in every child of Adam a brother of the dust. Let us strive to bind the whole human family together with the strong chain of Brotherly Love; Relief, and with Charity in thought, Charity in word, and Charity in deed engraven on each golden link; when this shall be accomplished, then shall the whole race of man, of every sphere, nation, color, creed, and language, be fused into one universal Brotherhood, sending up to the great I Am the most acceptable offering and oblation, one universal Song of praise, bursting forth as from one tongue, swelling up as one soul—

> Father of all! in every age.
> In every clime adored,
> By saints, by Savage, and by Sage;
> Jehovah, Ruler, Lord.
>
> To thee whose Temple is all Space,
> Whose altar, earth, air, skies,
> One chorus let all beings raise,
> All Nature's incense rise.

When that day comes we will lay aside our working tools for our labours will be ended. Then will our Lodges be closed, and our secrets may be proclaimed from the housetop, for the mission of Freemasonry will be accomplished. Let all the Brethren unite with me in saying, So mote it be!

Supreme Court.

Bishop of Columbia vs Dean Cridge.

FRIDAY, Oct. 23.

The Court sat at 11 a. m., when Mr. Davie asked for an adjournment till 1 p. m. as the articles of the compromise were being at that moment discussed by the Counsel and the Dean. The request was granted.

The Chief Justice again took his seat on the bench at 1:20.

Mr. Robertson, Q.C., for the Dean, regretted that he was obliged to say they had not been able to come to any agreement. He thought that whichever way the Court decided this case, it would not put an end to the state of affairs now in existence for some eight months or a year. He had, however, a proposition to make. There was no doubt that the cause of this was a different construction of the law between Bishop and Dean. The proposition was that the Chief Justice should take the case into his consideration and decide what was the law referring to Bishops towards Deans and vice versa. He had no doubt that both parties would be gover ned only too readily by his opinion on the matter.

The Chief Justice said that it was out of his power to give his opinion on the subject. In the first place it might take him a day, a week, or even a month to come to a decision; and then he was sitting as Judge on the case and could not give his opinion except as to the application before him. If he were to express his own opinion on the subject, he should be inclined to be opposed to both parties on some points.

Mr. Robertson thought that there was no doubt as to the Dean having disobeyed the authority of the Bishop; but that the Dean considered the Bishop's authority set aside by his advocating the Synod.

The Chief Justice thought that it was most unwarrantable that the Dean and his Churchwardens should, without trial, citation or otherwise, depose the Bishop. He admitted the canons said a Bishop was ipso facto excommunicated by the establishment of a Synod; but that was only after trial by an Archiepiscopal Court. It was not in the power of the Dean to depose his Bishop without application to a Court.

Mr. Robertson then proceeded to show that the plaintiff had failed to make out a prima facie case against defendant; with regard to the solemnization of marriages he submitted that by the local law any Registrar or Clergyman of any Church or religious denomination in British Columbia may celebrate a marriage according to the rites of the church to which he belongs. He contended that the suspension of the Dean's license, which was a license to preach, did not refer to his solemnizing marriages. There was no doubt that the defendant is a clergyman of the Church of England; the revocation of his license did not alter his status as a clergyman.

The Chief Justice said that if he were not a clergyman of the Church of England this case could not be brought against him; but that the ground of complaint was that he was a clergyman of the Church of England and without a license was solemnizing marriages, which was contrary to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England. He had his doubts about the matter and he thought that to be on the safe side he would grant the injunction against the Dean solemnizing marriages. He said he would feel ashamed if, a year hence, a case of legitimacy of children were brought up before him and he was told that had he granted the injunction there would have been no doubt as to the legitimacy of the children. The license as set out in the Bill said it was a license "to preach and officiate generally in the Cure of Christ Church."

Mr. Robertson read the license which was to "minister the office," and contended that defendant had the character of a clergyman and that under the Local Act he performed marriages according to the rites and ceremonies of his religion.

The Chief Justice said he could not decide the matter now; he had great doubts on the subject.

Mr. Robertson said that on the ground that the Bishop had no power further than a party to a contract, on the ground that if he had a sort of quasi authority, as that shown in the trial at Pandora street, and further the personal inconvenience to the defendant in being deprived of his means of living. On these grounds he asked that the injunction be not granted, or at all events not until after the hearing of the suit, which is likely to come on about six or eight months hence.

Mr. McCreight, on behalf of the plaintiff, said that no doubt Mr. Cridge's friends in Christ Church were numerous; but that Mr. Cridge knew that every time he stood up to do his duty in Christ Church there was a question as to the legality of his acts, and for such to be allowed to go on for the next 8 months, he was sorry to have to say it, was an impropriety and ought to be stopped at once. It was making Christ Church a non-conformist place of worship. On this ground he asked that the injunction be granted.

The Chief Justice said that before giving his decision he would give the parties one more opportunity to settle the matter, and read Lord Romilly's decision in the case of Long vs the Bishop of Natal, wherein he stated that he failed to find any one of the powers granted to the Bishop of Natal which he was not able to use; but the power to enforce obedience to his orders and to remove any obstruction to the execution of his orders is not given to him personally; but he must have recourse to a civil tribunal. He then goes on to speak about the Synod, not as to its legality, but as to its expediency, showing the danger of colonial churches becoming separated from the Mother Church. He thought that taking Mr. Cridge's statement in his letter of the 25th of September in all good faith and in the full sense of the words, viz: "That he did not intend and never had intended to resist the Bishop's lawful authority," he had no doubt it was meant to be so, and in the next place taking into consideration that the reproof administered by the Bishop to the Dean after the occurrence at Christ Church at Mr. Reece's sermon, was in no way finding fault with Mr. Cridge's religious views, in no way an approval of the views of Mr. Reece, but merely an admonition for the breach of canon 53, which forbids wrangling between clergymen in church; he thought it would be easy for the parties to compromise the matter, and he hoped they would, for it was an extremely painful thing for him to have to sit in judgment in a dispute between two men whom he had always looked up to and reverenced, and to whom he looked for guidance in the right way. He thought the Dean could not possibly object to apologising and owning his fault where he knew he was wrong; that no gentleman was ashamed to acknowledge a fault, and that there was no doubt the Dean was wrong on the occasion of the scene after Mr. Reece's sermon, and when reproved he ought to have apologized. He concluded by saying that he would give them till 11 a. m. to-morrow to come to some agreement, and that if they failed to do so he would make a formal order for an injunction at that time.

Arrival of the Glenora.

The Glenora, Capt. Irving, arrived about 7:45 last evening, after a passage of 13 days from Fort Wrangel—the weather being rough and stormy until after passing Cape Caution. They met the California entering Clarence Straits. About 20 passengers came down in her; but no mail, and not much gold. Most of the returned miners appear pretty well satisfied. The Stickeen was still open, the water high and the mining season over. Purser McLellan informs us that the California will most likely bring down some 250 more men in a day or two. It is not probable that many miners will winter either at Wrangel or Glenora Landing. Following are the passengers:

J. O. Floyd, A. McLennen, J. S. McDonald, J. H. Pittman, John Williams, David Harris, John McAllister, W. M. P. Jones, J. Neil, Archy Bell, Donald McLauchlin, Hank Elliott, D. McDonald, Wm. Stevens, Thomas Currie, W.D. Patterson, C. E., W. Harrison, W. A. Robertson, M. P. P., and a few others.

From Mr. McLellan, purser of the Glenora, we learn that Ralph Watson, an old Cariboo miner, died on the 5th of October from exposure, when within 8 miles of Telegraph Creek while on his way out from Dease Creek, which place he left on the 28th September apparently in good health. His friends did all in their power to save him, and after his death carried the body to Glenora Landing where it was decently buried — Mr. Lovell, J. P., reading the burial service. Deceased was 54 years of age and a native of Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Mr. Mackenzie at Prescott.

INDEPENDENT UTTERANCES.

Inasmuch as any public statements bearing upon the policy of the Dominion Government, more particularly that part of it relating to the Pacific Railway, possesses a peculiar interest at the present time, we need offer no apology for presenting to our readers the following extracts from the speech delivered by the Premier on the occasion of a recent Reform demonstration at Prescott, the full text of which is now before us. The speech, which is a very able one and was received with frequent bursts of applause, occupies five closely printed columns in the leading Ottawa journal. After referring to the circumstances under which his party came into power and the villification heaped upon it by the Opposition, Mr. Mackenzie went on to say:

"I have not, sir, since Parliament rose, had an opportunity of addressing a public meeting, nor have I in any way sought to make known my views respecting those matters which have transpired recently and are just now transpiring in the political arena, some of which I have just now referred to; but I cannot miss this opportunity of remarking that I never knew in all my experience anything to equal or even approach the mendacity and impudence to which some Tory journalists have recently attained. (Hear, hear.) I read almost every day that there are 'fresh dissentions in the Cabinet,' that there is about to be a 'break up in the Ottawa Government,' that Mr. Scott and somebody has had a violent quarrel, and that I am myself receiving kindly hints that the sooner I go the better. Now, it may be—I am sure it must be—very pleasant to those people who send those alarming telegrams to know that there never has been any dissention in the Cabinet, and that, even had the opportunity been offered for the facts to become known, no person with truth could have been able to say anything even kindred in spirit to those rumors which daily make their appearance through the Opposition press. I feel it my duty to say publicly on my own behalf and that of my colleagues, that our relations have from the beginning been of the most cordial and friendly character. (Hear, hear.) When we find men, professing to be journalists, claiming to be members of a noble and elevated profession, boasting that they have the means of obtaining Cabinet secrets by peeping through the keyholes, listening behind doors, and through information surreptitiously obtained from Government officials, you may conceive the deplorable condition into which Tory political literature has fallen. * * *

I have observed in the speeches made by some gentleman of the Opposition in Ontario, and in reference to their utterances on the British Columbia dispute that there has been an actual glorying in the hope that there would be an encounter in that quarter, and at the bare possibility of anything occurring which would place Ministers in a false position. They have with the greatest evident satisfaction contemplated the defection of British Columbia from the Confederation; they have advised the people to secede from the Union; and I need scarcely remind you that their political chief and leader, addressing his constituents at Kingston last winter, openly counselled the citizens of the Pacific Province to resort to this mode of avenging themselves on Canada. Sir, I am happy to be able to assure you, without committing to you the keeping of anything which pertains to Cabinet secrets, that there is not the remotest probability that the calamity they have advised, aided, abetted, and done their best to precipitate, shall ever even be threatened. The people of British Columbia themselves never suggested such a thing; they never even quoted the suggestion when made with approval. It was left to the leader of the ultra-loyal Tory party in this portion of the Dominion to make the vile and unworthy proposition, and it has been left to his most unscrupulous and unpatriotic newspaper hacks to advocate and elaborate the idea. * *

What was the condition of the public affairs of Canada when we assumed their administration? Sir, every one knows that if there is any difficulty in British Columbia, it is not of our making (cheers). We came into office with that condition staring us in the face. Everybody knows that the late Administration made a proposition to British Columbia, they passed that proposition into the law well knowing that it was impossible of fulfilment, and they vacated their offices last autumn without up to that time having taken the first step for the construction of the work which they had, on behalf of Canada, voluntarily undertaken to begin ere that time and complete within the next six years. (Hear, hear, and cheers.) The moment our Pacific Railway Bill was introduced last session, Dr. Tupper, as one of the commissioners who conducted the Opposition—as for leader, I do not who he was or where he was—(cheers),—but Dr. Tupper, I say, as chairman for the time being of the Opposition commission made a violent attack upon the measure, declaring that to carry out its provisions would utterly ruin the country, because of the vast expenditure it proposed. Curiously enough at another time he told us that it was only an attempt to make the people of British Columbia believe we were going to do something for them—something which we were not willing and would never be able to do. I thought it was rather strange and somewhat unfair that we should have been subjected to two charges so incompatible with each other by the same man, but this is only a specimen of the hon. gentleman's logic. [Hear, hear.] I repeat that upon assuming office we had these conditions facing us, and every member of the Tory party, from the leaders down to the newspapers, were bound to assist us in meeting them successfully as far as lay in their power, in order to obtain for the country the most favourable possible solution of the difficulty—a difficulty they had themselves created. (Hear, hear.) I knew what their course would be, but I am proud to say, sir, that after all their criticisms, that bill passed through the House without a single word being added or deducted from it, and it stands to-day upon the statute book as a record that Parliament entirely approved of the policy of the Administration as a proof, too, that we did our utmost to keep the agreement with British Columbia in the spirit, if not in the letter. * * *

I will not on this occasion dwell upon matters which may become the subject of future discussion in Parliament, but I may be permitted to say that I hope the course pursued by my own Government in relation to affairs of the first importance—such for example, as the Pacific Railway, the increase of facilities for settling the North West territory, and the maintenance of the supremacy of Canada and Great Britain in those vast regions—have been of a nature which may be characterized as eminently successful; and I have no doubt whatever we will be able carry out such a policy as will, while giving justice to all, accomplish the object we all desire—that is to obtain a means of direct and rapid communication across the continent on our own territory, and secure the settlement of those enormous and rich regions in the North West, which are as yet so little known to the white man. We have a great country between us and the Pacific Ocean, and we may well say, in the words of the poet:—

"No pent-up Utica contracts our powers,
For a whole boundless continent is our."
[Cheers].

We may well be proud of the advancement and progress we are making, and I believe there is not at this moment upon the face of this earth a happier or more prosperous people than the people of Canada. (Loud cheers.) To maintain this progressive and happy condition in the future, it will be our duty to take such measures as will tend to the development and increased prosperity of the country. He is no statesman who looks merely to the present moment, who merely introduces such measures into Parliament as will tend to strengthen himself in power and enlarge the patronage at his disposal, while no respect is paid to the future. (Hear, hear.) We are bound, as we trust to make good our claim to statesmanship, to look above and beyond the present, and to consider the likely effect of our measures upon the future of this continent, whose affairs we have at this stage of its progress been called upon to administer. In pursuance of that course, we have endeavored as far as possible, with the means at our disposal, to obtain a settlement upon a permanent and satisfactory basis of that question which caused the expulsion from power of one government last year and their replacement by another, as well as a more advantageous arrangement for the settlement of the unpeopled portion of the country. We were told by the Tory journalists when Parliament was about to be dissolved and an appeal made to the country in the early portion of the present year, that Mr. Mackenzie and his friends were the mere tools of Jay Cooke and the Northern Pacific Railway. That statement has been repeated again and again by the party which is justly entitled to the appelation of the "party of slander." I called upon them from my place in Parliament, after having minutely and specifically denied the charge, to silence their slanders or produce their proofs. They have done neither. I repeat the challenge to-day. (Loud cheers.) The country was assured that we never intended to touch the Pacific Railway, nor to relax our weakest endeavours to satisfy the just claims of British Columbia, yet when a few weeks ago we issued calls for tenders for the making of a trail or road through the woods across the continent, for erecting a trans-continental telegraph line and clearing out the space as a precursor of the construction of the railway, why sir, we were told it was an infamous thing to do so, and informed moreover that we had no business to do it. We were assailed in the first instance because, as was asserted, we never intended to proceed with the construction of the Pacific Railway, now we are assailed because we are doing our best to carry out this great work to the greatest limit which the means of the country and sound commercial policy will permit. We have given out the contracts upon every occasion to the lowest tenderer who has been able to furnish the necessary security for the due performance of the work, and yet our critics must find grave fault. The truth is that nothing would please them. (Hear, hear.) In order to afford the means of speedy ingress into Manitoba, it becomes necessary if possible, to give it the benefit of railway communication. It still takes eight or ten days to get there over the Dawson route with all its improvements. So far as the main line of the Pacific Railway is concerned, we have provided that the contracts must be submitted to Parliament for approval, but acknowledging the necessity of admitting Manitoba to the benefits of communication at the earliest possible moment, we asked and received from Parliament the power to construct the Pembina branch at the first convenient opportunity. I endeavored to get the United States people to finish the sixty-five miles of their road which are waiting completion to the border line at Pembina but I failed to get any intimation from them of their likelihood to do so soon. Nevertheless about six weeks ago we gave out the contract for grading the line from Fort Garry to Pembina thus putting ourselves in a position, as soon as they complete the connection, to run a railway into the centre of the country. (Hear.) We were fiercely attacked early in the spring because we did not procure the means of getting into that country by rail, but as soon as we had given out the contracts, we were as violently assailed from the same quarter because we had done it.

Important Speech delivered by Mr. Blake at the great Reform Demonstration in North York, Ontario.

We have only room for the following extracts:—

"I desire to say something of the present and the future, illustrated, it may be, by the reference to the past; and I turn to another question of very great importance—the present position of the Pacific Railway matter. You will have observed that when the Government of which I was then a member undertook to deal with that question, their policy was enunciated in distinct terms to the electors before the late appeal, and that policy was most unequivocally approved, first at the polls and subsequently in Parliament. (Hear, hear.) I see that a deputation has been sent to England; that the people of British Columbia—no, not the people of British Columbia, for I do not believe they as a body sympathize with the extreme views—that the Government of British Columbia has sent a deputation to England urging that some measure should be taken to force the Government and people of this country to do more than has been proposed with reference to the railway. We last session took the unpleasant step of very largely increasing the rate of your taxation in order to provide funds towards the fulfilment, so far as practicable, of this and other obligations imposed on you by the late Government. Every man among us is now paying one-sixth more taxes than before in order to this end. Parliament has agreed that the work shall be done just as fast as it can be done without further burdening the people of this country, and I believe that the step thus taken is a very long step on the part of the people of this country in redemption of the pledge given to British Columbia. At the period when terms were proposed to British Columbia which her rulers did not see fit to accept, I had ceased to be a member of the Canadian Government. Those terms in my opinion went to the extreme verge, and demonstrated the existence of an earnest desire to do everything which could be—with any show of reason—demanded, and I should very much regret if any attempt were made to entangle the country further, or arrange for the commencement and prosecution of the work more rapidly than is involved by the terms so offered, and the large provision which we made by the increase of taxation last session. We are called upon to commence the work immediately. I do not know that I can point out to you more strikingly the rashness—the insanity of the bargain thrust upon you by your late rulers, than by telling you that the abandoned line of the Fraser—abandoned early because it was thought by the engineers to be so expensive as to be impracticable—has been returned to, as affording the prospect of a better line than those upon the exploration of which such large sums have been expended. And this is the state of things long after the railway should, under the bargain, have been begun. We are asked to begin at once, though we cannot yet find a route, and while a mistake in the choice may involve extra expenditure not only of many millions in the first cost, but of annual millions more in the running of the road. (Hear, hear.) Until those surveys are thoroughly completed, and until we have found the least impracticable route through that inhospitable country, that 'sea of mountains,' it is folly to talk of commencing the work of construction. Speaking conjecturally, I am of the opinion that the British Columbian section of the railway, even if it turns out to be practicable as an engineering work, will involve an enormous expenditure, approximating to $36,000,000, and after its completion will involve an enormous annual charge on the revenues of the country for its running expenses; and I doubt much if that section can be kept open after it is built. I think the chief advantage the British Columbians will derive from the enterprise will consist in the circulation of money and the profits of mercantile operations attendant on the construction, and that Canada will be a frightful loser by the affair. Now, even under these circumstances, the fact that the population of British Columbia is only some 10,000 altogether, representing, perhaps, not so many householders as the audience I now see before me, ought not to disentitle them to say:—'You shall fulfil your bargain, or release us from our bonds.' It is their right to take such a course, if they think fit, but I deny that this is any reason why we should plunge this country into ruin by the attempt. I have some reason to believe that these people are sufficiently sensible and reasonable to recognize and act on the truth of the matter, unless, indeed, they are sustained by agitators in this country, who are willing, for the sake of creating an embarrassment to the Government, to excite false and delusive hopes among them. The temper of Parliament you may judge from the fact that during last session an amendment was moved by one of the British Columbian members (Mr. Bunster) insisting upon an early prosecution of the work in that Province, but he was sustained by five members only—two or three from his Province, and a couple of those whom my friend Mr, Mowat delights to call Ontario Tories. (Laughter.) If under all the circumstances the Columbians were to say:—'You must go on and finish this railway according to the terms or take the alternative of releasing us from the Confederation,' I would—take the alternative! (Cheers.) I believe that is the view of the people of this country, and it may as well be plainly stated, because such a plain statement is the very thing which will prevent the British Columbians from making such extravagant demands. If these 2,000 men understand that the people of Canada are prepared, in preference to the compliance with their ruinous demands to let them go, and to leave them to build the Columbia section with their 10,000 people their tone will be more moderate, and we shall hear no more talk about secession. The principal person indeed who has spoken of it hitherto is Sir John A. Macdonald, who almost invited it in his election speech during the late contest. Should they leave the Confederation, the Confederation would survive and they would lose their money. (Laughter.) With regard to those sections of the railway which involve the communication between our interior seaboard and the great Northwest, the utmost diligence is being used to put them under contract. I go heart and soul for the construction of these lines as rapidly as the resources of the country will permit, in conjunction with an extensive scheme of immigration and colonization. The work of construction in itself will afford very great facilities for the rapid colonization of those territories; the annual cash expenditure in labour will produce attractions enabling us to a considerable extent to people the land. The interests of Canada at large point very prominently to a speedy settlement of that country. In my own humble belief the future of Canada as a distinct State, the representative of British power on this continent, largely depends upon our success in colonising that region, and what is equally important and perhaps more difficult, on our success in retaining its sympathies, its trade, its commerce afterwards. Fertile as is the soil, great as are the resources, glorious as are the prospects with reference to production, it is certain that the distance from the great markets of the world of the inland portions of that country will form one great difficulty to be overcome. You have read of the war which is going on between the farmers and the railways in the Western States, the attempt which is being made to cut down freights by legislation. But I do not find that those railways are getting very rich. The fact is the war is a war against distance; it is a war against time and space; and that is the war the farmers of the Northwest will have to encounter. We ought to help as far as possible the successful prosecution of that war, and to that end we must do what was so much ridiculed during the late campaign—we must improve the water communications of the Northwest; you can carry by water for one-fifth of the cost by rail, and you may be able to carry at a profit if you can get water communication when it would not pay you to grow wheat to be shipped by rail. (Hear, hear.) This is the more important because new sources of supply are opening now to England, and it is likely that the price of breadstuffs will rather fall than rise. I look on the success of our enterprises in the settlement of the Northwest as practically dependant upon the improvement of the water ways. Of course, there must be railways at once to connect the sheets of water, and eventually a through line; but I am confident that a bushel of wheat will never go to England over an all-rail route from the Saskatchewan to the seaboard because it would never pay to send it. We must take it in the speediest and cheapest way to the head of Lake Superior, where our splendid St. Lawrence route commences; and we must use every effort to avert the threatened danger of a diversion to the States of the trade relations of that country. * * * The future of Canada, I believe, depends very largely upon the cultivation of a national spirit. We are engaged in a very difficult task—the task of welding together seven Provinces which have been accustomed to regard themselves as isolated from each other, which are full of petty jealousies, their Provincial questions, their local interests. How are we to accomplish our work? How are we to effect a real union between these Provinces? Can we do it by giving a sop now to one, now to another, after the manner of the late Government? By giving British Columbia the extravagant terms which have been refered to; by giving New Brunswick $150,000 a year for an export duty which cannot be made out as worth more than $65,000 a year? Do you hope to create or to preserve harmony and good feeling upon such a false and sordid and mercenary basis as that? Not so! That day I hope is done forever, and we must find some other and truer ground for Union than that by which the late Government sought to buy love, and purchase peace. We must find some common ground on which to unite, some common aspiration to be shared, and I think it can be found alone in the cultivation of that national spirit to which I have referred. (Cheers.)

Who Invented Sausages? not HEYWOOD.

A correspondent asks us this question: "Who was the inventor of sausages?" We answered: It was unknown. Julius Cæsar claimed to be the inventor, but historians and commentators have universally scouted his claim. There is no doubt in the minds of the best informed writers on the subject but that the Germans were the inventors of the sausage, and that Cæsar in his wars against the stubborn German tribes became acquainted with their way of making the sausage. On his return to Rome, after crossing the Rubicon, he tried to induce the inhabitants of the Imperial city to adopt it as an article of food, but the Romans were rich, they fed on luxuries garnered from the lands which they had conquered and they rejected the sausage. On the morning of the day of his death at the hands of the conspirators, Cæsar sadly informed his wife that Imperial Rome was tottering to its fall, and that fall was hastened by its rejection of sousages. It is a singular and extraordinary fact—one quoted by the great historian Simanides, and Gibbons, and Niebuhr—that no nation has been great as a military power, in modern times, which did not make sausages one of its prime articles of diet. The recent war between Germany and France proves this. Seventy-five years ago the French were intensely fond of sausage, then they overran Europe. But, like the Romans, they took to luxurous living, and the downfall of la belle France followed.

The Germans have always been a warlike nation. They have always been eaters of sausage. The greatest general of modern times, Moltke, dines upon sausage three times a day. He says that no man who is not a lover of sausages can ever make a great general. Some years ago he was called upon while at breakfast by a young officer. He was eating his usual meal of "wurst and pumpernickel," and asked the young officer to join him. The offer was declined on the ground that he never could eat sausages. "Sir," said the great general, looking at the officer with flashing eyes, "the man who cannot eat sausages need never expect promotion from me." The young officer at once applied himself so assiduously to the cultivation of a taste for sausages that in the late war he had risen to be General Von Moltke's chief of staff. A distaste for sausages led to the dismissal of a wooer of the General's daughter. She afterwards married a manufacturer of sausages with her father's approbation, and she is now the happy mother of eight healthy sausage-eating children. Were anyone to say in General Von Moltke's presence that sausages were made out of refuse dogs, he would regard it as a mortal offence. And yet he has never accounted for the decadence in the number of dogs in Germany since sausages became the national food, as frogs are that of the French, potatoes and herrings of the Irish, beef and plum pudding of the English, and buckwheat cakes and tobacco of Americans. * *

DR. BARNARD

HEREBY TENDERS HIS SINCERE THANKS to Dr. Thompson, of Portland, and the Ladies under his charge, who kindly permitted his witnessing the fillings of some of their teeth during his late sojourn in this city.

Every manipulation of the Doctor's was closely watched, from the adjustment of the Rubber Dam and its appliances to their teeth, to the formation of proper cavities and retaining pits therein, the Packing and Condensation of Gold and the subsequent polishing and burnishing of the same.

The Doctor is satisfied, from what he saw, and from recent operations of his own, that no perfect Filling can be accomplished without using the Rubber Dam and separately Annealing and Malleting every strip of gold into the cavity by itself. Gold thus condensed must last a lifetime.

DR. BARNARD is happy to inform the public that the process of preparing and Filling a Tooth with the aid of New Instruments and appliances is almost as much a pastime with him now as is the insertion of Partial or Entire Sets of Teeth.

Persons not born with a gold tooth in their mouth can readily have a Gold Crown built on a decayed tooth or solid portion thereof that will LAST FOREVER.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex Army Med Staff)

CHLORODYNE.

IS THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CAUTION—Vice-Chancellor Sir W P Wood stated that Dr. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the defendant, Freeman, being the inventor was deliberately untrue which he regretted had been sworn to. Eminent Hospital Physicians of London stated that Dr J Collis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne: that they prescribe it largely and mean no other than Dr Browne's—See TIMES, July 22, 1864.

The Public therefore are cautioned against using any other than

DR J. COLLIS CROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

REMEDIAL USES AND ACTION.

This INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the nervous system restores the deranged functions and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvelous good effects and wonderful cures while medical men extol its virtues most extensively using it in great quantities in the following Diseases:—

Diseases in which it is found eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Coughs, Asthma Cramp Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Cough, Hysteria, &c

The Right Hon Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J T Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet Dec 31, 1864.

From A Montgomery, Esq., late inspector of Hospitals, Bombay: Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy for Neuralgia, Asthma and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months severe suffering, and when other medicines had failed

Dr Lowe, Medical Missionary in India reports (Dec 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered the patient recovered.

Extract from Medical Times, Jan 10, 1866—Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox remedical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place.

Extract from the general Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera,—So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases,

Beware of spurious and dangerous compounds sold as CHLORODYNE from which frequent fatal results have followed

See leading article, Pharmaceutical Journal, Aug 1, p969, which states that Dr J. Collis Browne was the inventor of Chlorodyne that it is always right to use his preparation when Chlorodyne is ordered. Sold in bottles at 1s 12d, 2s 9d, 4s 6d, and 11s each.

CAUTION—None genuine without the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming medical testimony accompanies each bottle,
